'SO ENTER THAT DAILY THOU MAYEST GROW IN KNOWLEDGE WISDOM AND LOVE

So is inscribed in Ohio University's College Gate. Many students don't notice this inscription. However, this gate is the door to the College Green, the center of much social activity at OU.

In the 1970's, this archway withstood protests about Vietnam and the Kent State Shootings. In the 1980's, many students passed under it to hear the preachings of Rev. Jed Smock. And, in 1987, students walk under it into a world of socialization, with dogs romping, students reading under trees, and frisbees flying in the springtime. Only here is where you can find people gathered in groups talking no matter what the weather.

The college gate is the favorite place to college donations for various organizations. Many walk under it on their way to cultural events such as operas, dance recitals, and lectures.

The College Gate... Truly the door to the center of campus activity... And the door is always open.

Marching 110

The final seconds of the second quarter count down and the football team leaves the field.

When the fans hear, 'And now, under the direction of Mr. Ronald P. Socciarelli,' they know what is about to happen...the Ohio University Marching Band is going to perform another one of its exciting half-time shows.

From game to game the excitement of the crowd never decreases. The bleachers are always full of dedicated cheering OU Marching 110 fans.

The praise and dedication is well deserved. The band members arrived at school a week earlier than the student body to try out for a place in the band. Members are required to have their hair cut at a length so that it doesn't touch the uniform collar. They practice daily for two hours to learn their music and innovative dance routines.

Several of this year's highlights included trips to the Circleville Pumpkin Show and the Ohio Theatre. The Marching 110 also played half-time shows for a Buffalo Bills game in New York and a Cleveland Browns game.

At Varsity Night in Memorial Auditorium, fans and parents were given an opportunity to hear the band play such songs as '5150,' 'Invisible Touch,' and 'Dancing on the Ceiling' one last time. The seniors were introduced and given a chance to 'strut their stuff' in solo performances, and the night ended with a standing ovation which the Marching 110 seniors will undoubtedly take with them wherever their plans take them.

Mascot

The Ohio University Bobcat and Bobkitten are two of the most highly guarded secrets still alive today. However, their history is well publicized.

In 1925, the members of the athletic board contemplated an official nickname for OU to replace Ohio or the Green & White. They decided the best way to accomplish this was to sponsor a contest where hundreds of names and logos were submitted. After much debate, the Bobcat was declared the winner.

About 35 years later, the 'animal' debuted at the Homecoming football game against Miami. The Bobcats defeated the Redskins and on October 1, 1960, the Bobcat became known as a 'good luck charm.' This Bobcat clad was dressed in a bright green sweater and an Ohio baseball cap on his paper-mache head. Now the task to bring the Bobcat to life had begun. The most difficult part was the head; it was sent to France for construction. The clad was a present from the men of Lincoln Hall and the $250 cost was deducted from the social fund of their hall.

The final consideration of the committee was who was going to give life to the Bobcat. That lucky person was Dan Nichols who set the precedent that all Mr. Bobcats must live in Lincoln Hall and his identity must remain a secret. The Campus Affairs Committee then decided that the Bobcat would be a permanent member of the cheerleading squad and would cheer at all football and basketball games.

As far as the Bobkitten history is concerned, not much is known. It was originated by the girls of Howard Hall, but the uniform was vacated when the residence hall was torn down in 1972. Presently, the Bobkitten is being worn only by the sisters of Chi Omega. No one knows how the transformation originated.

The Bobcat and Bobkitten are still the most guarded secrets of the University. But then again, some things should remain that way.

Homecoming

This homecoming combined a lot of first time occasions. The Mortar Board, a senior honorary, hosted their alumni at their first reunion, Captain Homer T. Baird was the parade Marshall, and the OU bobcat football team's game was televised.

Although this weekend was centered on those who returned, the OU students were quite involved. Many groups participated in the colorful parade by creating floats of butterflies, baby cradles, and caves; all centering around the theme: THE START OF IT ALL.

Lisa Early, from Delta Sigma Theta, was crowned the Homecoming queen for 1987.

The weekend was one of much fun, excitement, and activity that was enjoyed by all.

Martin Luther King Day

Ohio University is becoming a well-known college whose standards are rising every year. OU has gradually refined many architectural and academic aspects that draw a growing number of freshmen each year; the future looks bright.

The 1986-87 school year brought about many positive activities within the Black community. Famous black personalities, such as the renowned poet/author Mayle Angelou, the executive secretary of NAACP, Benjamin Hooks, the charismatic Attallah Shabazz, daughter of Malcolm X and the dynamic Reverend Shuttlesworth, co-worker with Martin Luther King

The Black Student Union ardently fought for and received a voting commissioner's seat on OU governing body, Student Senate. The commissioner helped to create the new organization called Fusion: Black and African Unity which concentrates on unifying all Black and African organizations. Twenty-two students participated in the historical second march on Forsythe County, Georgia. Almost every day of February, Black history month, scheduled some type of cultural event honoring the numerous contributions of Black and Africans have made to America. The nationally celebrated holiday of Martin Luther King was accompanied with a candle march for peace circling the campus. There were also services held in Galbreth Chapel to remember Malcolm X, the fuel for the Black revolution during the 1960's. The first annual Black Unity Festival, a united effort by the entire community, was also held.

1987 - A year of scandals, tragedies, holy wars and funerals. A year of surprises and new faces.

A plan to trade arms to Iran in exchange for hostages was exposed when an Israeli magazine revealed what was going on. Congress then began hearings to determine what laws, if any, President Reagan and his advisors broke.

A summit between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. ended almost immediately when both Reagan and Gorbachev refused to budge on the issue of a space defense system.

The U.S.S. Stark was damaged severely when Iraqi planes fired trench-made missiles on the ship. Thirty-seven Americans were killed in the incident, which the U.S. and Iraq agreed was a 'case of mistaken identity.'

Jim Bakker resigned as leader of the PTL after it was uncovered that he slept with a church secretary. His wife, Tammy, had just been released from the Betty Ford Clinic for drug abuse.

One of the largest civil rights marches of the decade took place after an attack was made on a rally held in Martin Luther King Jr.'s honor. Several thousand protesters marched on Forsyth County, Georgia after the controversial event took place.

In sports, the New York Giants and the Denver Broncos made it to the Superbowl, with the Giants out on top. The New York Mets beat out the Boston Red Sox to win the World Series.

Growing Pains and Family Ties were the favorite sitcoms, and Moonlighting delighted viewers by finally writing David and Mattie into a love affair.

U2 and Bon Jovi topped out the college charts. Peter Gabriel made a comeback with 'Sledgehammer' and 'Big Time,' while Genesis sold out at most of the locations on their world tour.

Locally, a middle-aged homemaker and mother of two was convicted of murdering her husband and sentenced to 18 years in prison. Naomi Wooten's sentence was suspended during her appeal process, allowing her to remain free until the process ends.

A physical therapist for Hudson Health Center was fired after several female students filed complaints against him for sexual misconduct.

The OU Board of Trustees announced a 4.5 percent increase in room and board and a possible $115 per quarter raise in tuition.

Rythm Method and Carolina Peaches, two local bands, became favorites of OU students and entertained in uptown bars all year.

1987, a year of surprises, of tears, of smiles, and of new faces.

The Performing Arts Series provided various types of entertainment from all over the world for the OU student body and community.

Entertainment such as plays and dances were experienced by all. The tickets were relatively inexpensive and the shows were enjoyed at Memorial Auditorium.

International Day

Film Fest 87 included films from 12 different countries. The theme of the festival was, "Third World Perspectives." Besides the competition, feature-length films were shown at the Varsity and Athena theatres. In addition to the movies, there was a panel discussion on Third World cinema.

The 14th annual event ran for one week, Sunday, April 26 through Friday, May 1. The feature films, 'Mona Lisa,' 'Sid and Nancy,' 'A Night with Appalshop,' 'Bell Diamond,' 'Ashes and Embers,' 'Faces of Women,' 'Black Cannon Incident,' and 'Garbage Boys,' all cost $3 per person. The movies began at 7:30 each night and were divided into International Showcase and Theme categories.

The competition films were produced independently. 'Tribute,' a man's tribute to his brother, and 'Loose Corner,' a film about things that normally would be impossible for unchemically induced minds were shown.

Several presentations were given at the Athena. A native of Ethiopia spoke about the films he produces which deal with political reform. Also, a film maker who teaches at Kent State spoke.

The festival allowed Athens residents and OU students to get an inside look at Third World countries and see what kind of people live there.

OU Attracts International Students

While the majority of the student body goes home for school breaks, another group stay at OU. They don't have their parents and siblings travel to Athens for special weekends and usually aren't able to see them for two or three years.

This group of people make up OU's international student population. They come from over 80 nations. They come from such places as Korea, Malaysia, Italy, Japan and Thailand.

Most international students come from developing nations and are drawn to the United States because of the technology and the chance for higher education.

OU was an attractive choice to many of the students because of its small size and OU's attentiveness to the needs of its international students.

To help international students adjust to the new culture and city, there are more than twenty internationally oriented student organizations at OU. International Student and Faculty Services works to help international students join in campus activities.

The Athens Friends of International Students sponsors an International Coffee Hour in Voigt Hall. The coffee hour is aimed to promote hospitality between the international and Athens communities.

Springfest

Sun, fun, music, and suds... that's what Springfest 1987 was all about

An estimated 15,000-20,000 partiers attended this year's Springfest to empty 300-350 kegs of beer.

Sunburned parties jammed to music by The Safarians, a local band, to start the day off at 11:00a.m.. The Rhythm Method began "jammin'" at 12:30 p.m. followed by Juicy, The Fabulous Flashbacks, a Youngstown band started playing 50's and 60's music at 3:30p.m..

Headlining Springfest was Little America, who sings 'Walk on Fire'. Ipso Facto, a Minneapolis-based band, ended the day with a bang.

Springfest would never happen if it weren't for its fundraisers. Fayrewether, an Akron-based band, performed February 26th in the Baker Center Ballroom to start off the 1987 Springfest fundraising campaign.

The Beach Party is one of Springfest's major moneymakers. It was a definite success this year by collecting over $10,000. An estimated 2,500 beach-clad partiers flocked to this man-made beach to play volleyball, build sandcastles, and listen to music by The Safarians and Blues guitarist Lonnie Mack. Between nine and twelve inches of sand was spread on the Bird Arena's floor.

The second annual Reggaeefest featuring The Safarians and NU HU was held May 1 at the Baker Center ballroom.

Other fundraisers included an acapella May 13 held at the Frontier Room and a Jamaican jam, held at Hangar 5. Springfest cups, buttons, and shirts were also sold.

Sibs Weekend

Every Winter quarter thousands of miniature O.U. students descend upon campus. For one weekend big brothers and sisters show their sibs all about college life.

Many different organizations hold activities just for sibs. For the second consecutive year, West Green Council held a West Vegas Nite where they provided legal gambling from roulette wheels to Black Jack. The evening was ended with an auction where potato chips sold for 10-$15,000 a bag.

O.U. Student Alumni Board and Alumni Chapters provided chaperoned bus services for the sibs while Greek organizations held fashion shows and parties. Other activities included charicure drawing, picture taking with the Bobcat and Bobkitten, cartoon night, talent and lip-sync shows, open skating, and movies.

The weekend was a fun-filled and exciting time for all.

East Green Weekend

April 24 and 25 were designated East Green Weekend. With it being the first of the green weekends before Springfest, the theme was, 'First is always the best...do it on East.' Rain early Friday night got things a little wet, but by the end of the evening, sufficient amounts of good weather, good music, and good beer had everyone in fine spirits.

Improvements from last year included more live music and a virgin drink bar, sponsored by BARS (Being Alcohol Responsible Students). The most controversial vending booth was Gamertsfelder's condom booth, a booth stressing 'safe sex.'

Increased sales at the vending booths, and sales of your favorite sudsy malt beverage combined to make record profits for the Green. East Green Council President, Gary LaGuardia jokingly remarked, 'We made so much money, we must have been doing something illegal!' LaGuardia credited the many dedicated Council members and hall representatives for the success of the event.

'Everyone worked so well together that things almost seemed to be running themselves,' commented LaGuardia.

Vendors

You awake from your afternoon nap and realize that the dining hall has just stopped serving dinner and your refrigerator is empty. After consulting your wallet you are horrified to find that what you could have sworn was a ten turned out to be a five dollar bill. With the fear of going hungry lurking in your head, you decide to head uptown. Only when you've given up finding any cheap food do you see your first relief.

There ahead looms the vendor's wagons. Ohio University students are blessed with a piece of local legislature which allows vendors to come in and sell their goods along the street. The food is safe (no known deaths), diverse (kick the hamburger habit!), and cheap! Tacos and burritos can be found along with French bread pizza and bagels. It is served fresh and hot and will satisfy any appetite.

The vendors are in Athens any time students are, it does not matter rain or shine, morning or night, there are usually satisfied customers there; either taking a break from cafeteria food, looking for an inexpensive meal or heading home from a night uptown

by doug engle

The tradition lived on... 'Buck-fifty Night' - the happy hour of the Athens' movie theatres. Hoards of people waited in line, sometimes in below freezing temperatures or in rainy weather, to take advantage of these reduced prices. This year the specials included such box office hits as 'Ruthless People,' starring Danny DeVito and Bette Midler, 'Top Gun,' starring sultry Tom Cruise, and 'Back To School,' starring Rodney Dangerfield.

Students took a break from studies during the week by seeing a good movie. Luckily for OU students and their budgets, it only cost $1.50.

Many bought tickets one hour or two in advance in order to beat the rush. Many ran to Carol Lee's to buy popcorn and other goodies, while others chose to stop for a beer before catching the flick.

'Buck-fifty Nights will always be a success with Ohio University students.

Bars

For practically every taste and every mood, there is a bar in uptown Athens. While some bars come in and go out every year, there are many that have survived the years and are student favorites.

The CI offers three pool tables, loud music, and plenty of great bartenders.

For dance enthusiasts, The Greenery (known as a freshman bar), Gee Willecker's, and The Nickelodeon are the places to go. The Greenery offers a large dance floor and plenty of good music. Greenery-goers usually agree that a 'brainstomper' is the bar's best drink. Gee Willecker's also has room to dance, but it is better known for its' buckets of beer. Finally, The Nickelodeon gives students a smaller dance floor, but a rowdier crowd. The Nick is also known for its' 'Mug Club.'

For those mellower moments when you are in the mood to 'just hang out,' Athens offers the Union (a townie bar), Crystal Casino, The Frontier Room, CJ's, Cat's Eye, and O'Hoolley's. Each is unique and offers an atmosphere suitable for all.

Fancy athletes or Greeks? Then the places to go are The Junction, PawPurr's, and The Pub. Want to dress up and relax? Studio 38 and The Hideaway (previously 19 South Court Street) offer beautiful waitresses and great atmospheres. The drinks are a little more expensive, but they're worth it.

Finally, Athens' biggest bar, Hangar 5, is a favorite of many because of its uniqueness and nightly specials. And MacSweeny's, Athens' newest bar, is slowly but surely attracting bigger crowds and groups of 'the usuals.'

So, whatever you like, more or likely Athens offers it. As long as there are students, there will be bars to accommodate them.

With an overall record of 1-10, the OU football team ended their season with a success over Northern Illinois.

The bobcats began their season with a loss of 21-16 to Bowling Green.

The teams quarterback, Bruce Porter, headed the MAC in total offense (209.3 yds. a game) and Tom Compenolle caught 61 passes for a total of 626 yds to head the conference in receiving. Larry Grimes placed first in the MAC for punt returns (19.9 per game).

Even though the team was not on a huge winning streak, fans still supported them. In rain, cold, and sunshine the fans arrived to cheer them on.

The team is looking forward to training and recruiting for a winning and successful season next year

Women's Volleyball

Volleyball— — a sport in which every hit, every spike, and every point counts. Unfortunately, for the OU women's volleyball team, every missed point was needed.

With a 0-16 MAC Conference record and a 6-21 overall record, the women netters had a tough season. According to Coach Jamie Ianni, a lack of leadership was the cause. Also contributing to their downfall this season was the loss of two seniors to graduation last year.

OU's volleyball team may not have excelled on the court, but they did excel in academics. The team's fall quarter grade point average was one of the highest of all OU athletics teams that quarter.

The outstanding women netters, according to Ianni, were co-captain Kelly Short and hitters Becky Roberts and Kerry Quinn. Ianni believed the most improved players for the season were co-captains Shelia Lange, senior, and Kelly Short, junior.

Recruitment for the 1987 season looks good, and Ianni believes next year looks promising.

Field Hockey

by harry snave

Field hockey is a fall, varsity sport in which the season starts in late August and lasts until the beginning of November. Every year the season ends with a MAC championship tournament. This year it was held in Muncie, Indiana on October 31st and November 1st. Their participants included Miami University, Ball State, Kent State, and Ohio University. Even though the lady bobcats did not finish first, they kept their spirits high with the intent of taking the MAC next season.

According to OU's field hockey player, Cindy Bradfish, she feels very confident about the 1987 season. Cindy feels that their hard work and excellent motivation of the players and staff can hopefully help them to 'GO ALL THE WAY'.

Men's Rugby

The 1986 fall rugby season was one of gritting teeth, vigorous workouts and tough team action. If you have ever seen a rugby game, you would know that each player had to be in top physical condition to endure the vigor of each game. Because rugby is a club sport at OU, the team works that much harder to succeed in attaining their goals for each season.

Rugby is also a social sport. This is so because every home team always hosts a party for the visiting team. This also helps the team raise money for their club. They have other fundraisers too, such as T-shirt sales, dues, donations, and the ever-popular rugby-beer.

"This sesason was a tough one," quotes Jeff Allen, rugby team treasurer. "Many injuries had occured which really put an impact upon the whole team." Among those injured were: Brian Shrig, Mark Sonnerfeld, Mark Nicholson, and Greg Nelson.

These players know what they have to do to attain their goals, and they do it! Part of their goals are to arrange their own transportation to and from games, conduct their own practices, and elect new officers each year.

Goals for next year include: elect new officers, condition incoming players for a winning team, place in Ohio 15's tournament, strive for higher achievement and playing performance, and bring larger crowds to their games.

Men's Cross Country

Young Team Improves

'1986 was a year of tremendous improvement on the part of a young team and of progress in the area of women's cross country," according to OU's cross country coach Elmore Banton.

This year, the women's team, lead by co-captains Christy Fouch and Tammy Walls, finished the season 5-2 in dual meets and captured three championship and invitational titles. The women finished fourth in the Mid-American Conference Championship compared to the eighth place finish in

As stated earlier by Coach Banton, the women's team was very young, composed of six freshmen and four juniors. Two of the freshmen, Suzie Neas and Tracey Meyer, received the honor of All-Mac finishing ninth and tenth respectively.

At the Ohio University Athletic Department Awards party, several members of the team received honors. The Most Valuable Runner award was given to Neas, from Tomah, Wis. and Meyer, from Norwalk, Ohio. This twosome was also awarded the honor of Outstanding Freshmen. The veteran and co-captain, Walls was bestowed the award of Most Improved.

Since the team had no graduating seniors, Coach Banton believes that the team will be one to be reckoned with next season.

Men's Basketball

1986 was a year full of surprises for the Ohio University Men's Basketball Team. The season got off to an early start when the team traveled to Europe for a 10-day trip in August. The men faced teams from Belgium, Holland, France, and Switzerland ending with a 5-5 record. This was surprising because before leaving, they were told the team would be lucky to win one or two. "It was exciting, interesting, and it gave me a chance to meet people from other countries. I learned a lot," commented sophomore forward George Reid. The only other thing which happened was the injury to Dave Jamerson, an experience the team could have done without. As a result, Jamerson returned to the United States early and was red-shirted for the season.

With the loss of Robert Tatum and Paul Baron to graduation last year, first-year coach Billy Hahn needed to rely on co-captains Roger Smith and Rich Stanfel for leadership and experience. Also emerging was Dennis Whitaker, the solo freshman on the squad. "It was mostly fun," says Whitaker. "I was able to play a lot more than a regular freshman due to all the injuries and my playing ability." The injuries to which he is referring were those to Steve Bruning, who was sidelined for the last part of the season due to a back injury; Reid who lost two weeks with a foot injury; and the knee injury to Jamerson.

Ohio started out slow in the season losing four of the first seven games following a win over Tri-State in the home opener. After a tournament loss to UNLV, the nation's number one ranked team, the Bobcats rallied to a five-game winning streak with MAC road wins at Toledo and Kent State. Then the team dropped its next five games ending with an overtime win over Toledo and a victory against Anderson College. Next, Ohio lost to Kent State by one point and the following day Coach Hahn suspended leading scorer, Paul 'Snoopy' Grahm, for academic deficiencies. Grahm remained on the bench for the rest of the season. The team responded by winning the next four games, including a home victory over Miami. This earned Ohio a spot in the MAC tournament at Central Michigan. There, Bowling Green knocked the Bobcats out with a last second free throw shot which ended their season with a 14-13 record.

Paul Grahm finished as Ohio's leading scorer with a 21.1 average for 22 games, followed by Marty Lehmann with 10.1 ppg. John Rhodes led the team in rebounds, and Roger Smith headed the pack of assists with a total of 119.

Although the Bobcats lose Stanfel, Smith, and Bruning to graduation, Ohio has signed four new players to enter OU in the fall. The team will be at full strength and should be a definite contender for the MAC title next season.

the MAC meet (59 ft.) and the discus (167 ft., 3 in.). Finishing third in the 200-meter dash (0:26.86), Troy Henley captured a personal best. He also placed fifth in the 100-meter dash (0:10.86).

Other successful team members were Frank Zoldak and Shannan Ritchie in the steeplechase and 10,000-meter and 5,000-meter races, Steve Grassie in the 800-meter run, and Rich Small in the triple jump and long jumps.

Some highlights of the season were O.U. capturing second in Kent Pentagonol's Larry Rumbama was the high scorer of the meet. Other successes include the Kent State University dual meet where the team (O.U.) won. The high scorers of this meet were Greg Jones, Troy Henley, Rich Small and Frank Zoldak.

The women's track team finished their season by placing sixth in this years MAC with 53 points. The team greatly improved over last years final points of 18.

Some highlights of this years MAC were Tracy Meyer placing fourth in the 5,000-meter (17:17.30) and second (35:50.8) in her first 10,000-meter race. With a throw of 159 ft., 8 1/2 in., Anne Boylard defended her javlin title and first place. Anne also placed fifth in the shot put (46 ft., 4 in.). Erika Polk placed second in the 400-meter (0:56.39). Amy Fisher captured a personal jump record of 5 ft., 9 1/4 in. The Senior Co-Captain, Ann Kent, captured second place in the shot put, just 3 in. shy of first.

Other highlights of the season include the Kent Pentagonal where Anne Bolyard (javelin), Ann Kent (shot & discus), Tracy Meyer (5,000-meter), Erika Polk (sprints), and Amy Fisher (jumps) all placed first.

With a combined team effort the women completed a very successful 1987 season.

Intramurals

The uptown scene isn't the only way for OU students to temporarily forget their classes.

The Ohio University Department of Intramural and Club Sports offers a wide variety of individual and team activities for students, faculty, and staff. This year, over 5,000 people used these activities as a way to get much needed exercise, escape from books, and to get together with mod-mates, floor sections, and friends.

Fall quarter, 160 teams of men and women played touch football, and 33 teams competed in soccer. Creative team names like 'Drink 5' and the 'Thundercats' made it on the winners list for football, while the 'Delts' and the 'Mod-Squad' teams won their divisions of soccer. Other fall activities included innertube water polo and basketball, bocceball, horseshoes, tennis, golf, and volleyball.

'Hogs II' were the campus champions in the men's division of broomball, while 'Six Pack Attack" and 'Nymphos' won in the women and co-ed divisions. Additional winter quarter activities included bowling, billiards, table tennis, and racquetball tournaments.

Spring quarter brought muggy temperatures and more intramural fun with 302 teams participating in regular and 3-pitch softball. Other team activities included baseball, innertube water polo, tug-of-war, and horseshoes. Individual activities included a track and field meet, bowling, racquetball, wrestling, and tennis, among others.

President Ping

After 12 years as the President of Ohio University, Dr. Charles Ping still feels the special ambiance which drew him to Athens. In 1975, he came here because of the people and attractiveness of O.U. and today experiences a sense of pride to be part of this institution.

As President, Dr. Ping is furthering some positive changes and growth in many aspects of university life. His revised Educational Plan encompasses the third century in the life of O.U. and the measurement of growth of the university in undergraduate and graduate degrees. He sees an increased intensity of involvement in faculty research and a need for Research Challenge Funds.

President Ping feels that his duties and position have a direct effect on student life and activities. His most important function is to relate the institution as a whole to the state legislature in order to emphasize the need for financial support and student access to college. An indirect result to these problems are financial aid programs and the Higher Education Act. Another responsibility is to relate the institution to alumni and keep them abreast on current happenings on campus. Also, he encourages addressing the needs of the students and is often seen talking to students around campus, in residence halls, and as a guest speaker for many organizations.

Before accepting the Presidency of O.U., Dr. Ping was the provost of Central Michigan State University, dean of the faculty at Tusculum College, and a philosophy professor at four other universities. He received his undergraduate degree at Southwestern University and pursued graduate studies with degrees in philosophy and theology with a Ph.D from Duke University.

Dr. Ping lives with his wife at the presidential residence on Park Place. He likes to swim or read in his spare time and relaxes by taking long walks around campus. He feels a sense of history and excitement, especially when visiting Galbreath Chapel where his daughter was married.

No one can tell what the future will bring to Ohio University. If it is an increased enrollment, better quality education, research grants, or possibly a branch in Japan, President Ping will be ready and willing to serve the University to the best of his ability.

In December 1986, construction of the E.W. Scripps Hall was finally completed, much to the approval of journalism students and professors. Formerly known as Carnegie Hall, the building was designated for use by the School of Journalism in a University space plan called the Hirschman Study, completed several years ago.

The original Carnegie Hall structure, built in 1905, first served as the University library and has undergone several major renovations since then.

Construction began on the new Scripps building in September 1984 and was scheduled to be completed by December 1985. However, problems arose in April 1985 and construction crews left for five months. After the problems were worked out, construction resumed in September 1985 and was completed last December. The building underwent major renovations including all floors, walls and ceilings, heating, air conditioning, and the addition of an elevator.

In addition to the existing building, a 2,543-square-foot addition was placed at the north side. This addition houses a skylit lobby, perimeter faculty offices, and the Lasher Learning Center, named after the original journalism building. Laboratories for graphics and visual communications and the radio-television studios occupy the ground floor.

As an added feature, an amphitheatre accommodating about 300 people was built into the hillside leading down into the building's new entrance.

Funding for the project came from the E.W. Scripps Foundation, where a $1.5 million endowment provided funds for the architectural and building plans. At the groundbreaking of the completed building, the E.W. Scripps Foundation announced an additional $250,000 gift for equipment and furnishings for the building.

The additional money to complete the project was secured by the University in a state capital request. According to Tom Peters, associate director of the School of Journalism, Cortland Anderson was the key person in negotiating agreements and lining up funds for the project. Anderson, who died in December 1985, was the School of Journalism's director.

The E.W. Scripps School of Journalism has almost 900 undergraduate and graduate majors. Sequence areas include advertising, magazine, news writing and editing, public relations, visual communication, and broadcast news. Masters and doctoral programs are offered at the graduate level. The school is accredited by the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communications.

According to Peters, the Scripps building "looks like no other building on campus," and offers "warmth and richness of interior design." However, the purpose of the new building, Peter says, is "to produce a better prepared student," and not "to just show off pretty bricks and mortar."

The College of Business

The College of Business holds full certification from the American Assembly of collegiate schools of Business for its undergraduate and graduate programs.

The college places between 60-70 interns a year and publishes a resume book yearly, giving the credentials of those students who qualify as internship applicants.

The College of Business offers 14 different undergraduate majors. The accounting major is flexible so students get both a broad understanding of basic business plus an opportunity to specialize in one or more fields of accounting. Accounting majors may not only study general accounting theories, but may also specialize in managerial, public, governmental, tax, industrial cost accounting, or institutional accounting.

If a student wants to work overseas, they may want to look into a major in International Business. To be an International Business major, students must complete the core business courses and fulfill the requirements for a major in accounting, finance, management, marketing, or production management. An intermediate modern language course or a third world culture course is also required.

If a student isn't sure which area of business to study, they can enter the college as an undecided student. An advisor will help with course selections and in exploring the various fields of study.

College of Communication

by robin crowel

The College of Communication is recognized both nationally and internationally. Designed to meet more fully the needs of a changing society, the college trains students for professional careers in journalism, telecommunications, voice and data communication, visual communication, and organizational and interpersonal communication.

Boasting an enrollment of approximately 2000 students, the college operates on the basis that professional competency demands the highest possible proficiency in the fields of specialization and a broad liberal education in other disciplines.

The College of Communication offers its majors five academic schools: the School of Communication Systems Management, the School of Interpersonal Communication, the E.W. Scripps School of Journalism, the School of Telecommunications, and the School of Visual Communication.

The School of Communication Systems Management focuses to develop interdisciplinary professional communication managers. It is designed to train students in areas of voice and data communication.

The School of Interpersonal Communication is committed to providing quality instruction in the theoretical bases of human communication and the application of theory within a number of specific contexts. Students within the major can choose courses which can lead to fields such as teaching, law, politics and government, theology, foreign services, public relations, human services, labor-management relations, personnel, campaign and propaganda administration, and poll and survey research.

The E.W. Scripps School of Journalism has over 900 students enrolled. It is one of only two schools in the nation with accredited undergraduate sequences in advertising, public relation, news writing and editing, magazine journalism, photojournalism, and broadcast news.

The School of Telecommunications is designed to prepare students in all aspects of telecommunications. Students participate in classroom and laboratory experiences; practical training can be received by working on the University-operated cable channel, the All-Campus Radio Network, and the stations WOUB-AM, WOUB-FM, and WOUB TV.

The School of Visual Communication trains its students for jobs in picture editing, photo communication, photo illustration, advertising photography, multimedia, educational media, theatre communication, medical communication, and electronic visual communication.

College of Health and Human Services

The College of Health and Human Services had approximately 1295 students enrolled in its five schools of study during the 1986-87 academic year.

With more than 100 skilled faculty and staff, the college prepares students to operate in a variety of health care and human services roles.

The college is comprised of the following schools: Health and Sport Sciences, Hearing and Speech Sciences, Home Economics, Nursing, and Physical Therapy.

The School of Health and Sports Sciences offers its majors study in health sciences, recreational studies, and sport sciences. Students may become certified in athletic training, health education, long-term health care, and physical education.

The School of Nursing prepares students for the professional practices of nursing and provides a foundation for graduate study. The program is designed for registered nurses who are graduates of state approved associate degree or diploma programs. It increases availability for professional development and/or career mobility for registered nurses.

The School of Hearing and Speech Sciences grants B.S., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees in hearing and speech sciences. The bachelors degree is considered to be pre-professional. Students entering this program must be eligible to go on to graduate school to obtain clinical certification or complete course work and student teaching for certification as a speech therapist in the schools.

The School of Home Economics offers programs that provide specialized preparation in family studies and community services, human nutrition and food services, and human environment and design. The school is accredited by the American Home Economics Association.

The School of Physical Therapy focuses on the preparation of physical therapists for practice in rural community settings. Students will also possess the necessary skills for practice in larger, metropolitan centers. The programs include basic and clinical sciences, physical therapy arts and sciences, health services, health services administration, research, and education.

The past year the College of Osteopathic Medicine celebrated its tenth anniversary. They are excited with the first ten successful years and are looking forward to more.

The college enrolls approximately 400 students and physically resides in three former residence halls; Grovesnor, Irvine, and Parks. These three halls were transformed into the clinic and teaching areas. In June of 1987, the college began construction of a new wing in the area between Parks and Grovesnor. The construction is expected to take approximately one year to complete.

University College houses many different programs. The college organizes preCollege orientation for new and transfer students each summer. They provide academic advising for students who cannot decide what they would like their career choice to be. University College is also responsible for the University Professor program. This specific program recognizes six professors for teaching excellence. A committee of undergraduates interview each candidate and make the selections along with the chairperson, Mark Graham, a University College Staff member. The six professors that are recognized receive a one-thousand dollar award for "professional and educational development." Along with the monetary award, the professor is also permitted to teach two new courses.

The University College staff is committed to supporting students and helping each make career choices as well as orientation and making each student feel comfortable with their new environment.

Honors Tutorial College

Located at 35 Park Place, the Honor's Tutorial College combines the American Tradition of honors with the British tradition of tutorials. While enrolled in the Honors Tutorial College (HTC), students receive a personal and individualized education in any of 23 fields.

Average enrollment in the college is 130 students which insures a maximum degree of individualized instruction. Generally, a student will take 16-20 hours per quarter including at least one independent study course.

Many HTC students graduate in three years and the remainder do so in 4. Alumni have consistently praised the Honors College for preparing them for law school, graduate school, and the competitive job market. Alumni support provides thousands of dollars per year toward scholarships for HTC students.

The Academic Advancement Center

Alden Library is not just for studying and researching. It is also the home of the Academic Advancement Center.

AAC offers many academic services to OU students. The College Adjustment Program, otherwise known as CAP, provides free tutoring and advising to students who are eligible. The learning Lab, run by Mary Morgan one of the AAC's basic skills instructors, lets students walk in and learn speed reading with audio tapes. A math workshop has been developed to help freshmen with math skills. Other workshops deal with various aspects of academia, such as exam panic, preparation and effective study skills.

A writing hotline has also been recently developed to be 'online' with students who have questions about their papers. William Dewees, the writing skills coordinator, began the hotline last year. Students call in and ask questions about grammar, paper organization and topics. Dewees and students volunteers answer writing questions.

The AAC benefits all students. Whether you want to learn speed reading or just ask about the placement of a comma, the AAC can always help.

Learning Resource Center

The Learning Resource Center, located on the second floor of Alden Library, provides many different services to the University community. It offers a collection of over 1000 films, videocassettes, and other media available on a rental basis. The center provides a large amount of audiovisual equipment for instructional use such as opaque projectors, tape recorders, overhead projectors, screens, video cassette players, and videodisc players.

One of the newer services offered is for full-time University students, faculty, and staff. This service helps prospective personal computer buyers and users choose which computer system is best for them. The center will help purchase the computer chosen, and because of agreements made with several manufacturers, they can obtain some computers at substantially lower prices.

The Center provides many useful and necessary services. They are also working on new projects, including a computer for the blind. Most of their services are either free or are paid for by the Center in accordance with a ceiling for rental fees established for each academic department at the beginning of each school year.

Chimes Junior Honor Society is an organization for those juniors who have demonstrated outstanding scholarship, leadership, and service to the community. Under the direction of the 1986-87 officers, Chimes has become more organized, more active, and more selective. Whereas Chimes originally inducted any number of qualified applicants, the membership is now limited to 75 persons.

In the past, Chimes has been active in ushering for Ohio University theatre, participating in the Student Escort Service, and getting involved in worthwhile community projects.

In the future, Chimes plans to continue its' past activities as well as induct O.U. President Charles Ping as an honorary member, produce and distribute brochure explaining what Chimes is, and become active with such groups as the Athens Coalition Against Hunger and the March of Dimes. Chimes is growing into a leading honor society on campus.

Student Alumni Board

Student Alumni Board is the student component of the Ohio University Alumni Association. Members represent every college in the University. Membership selection, which is open to all freshmen, sophomores, and juniors, is held early fall quarter each year.

The organization coordinates programs for Ohio University students, the Athens community, and Ohio University alumni.

Activities include the Extern Program, finals week survival kits, 3-on-3 basketball tournament, welcome kits to resident halls, and the Senior Champagne Reception on Commencement Eve.

Delta Sigma Theta

On Saturday, October 5, 1963, eight dedicated women were initiated as the founding line of Epsilon Iota Chapter. It is to these eight women that we give tribute for the birth of our beloved chapter and for being recognized as the first Black sorority on Ohio University's campus.

In December of 1962, the "TiDels," then known as a 'Negro women's social club,' was organized under the Campus Affairs Committee of Ohio University. For ten months, the group worked toward national affiliation with Delta Sigma Theta Sorority. They participated in service projects and attended Panhellenic Council meetings. Less than a year later, the TiDel club was officially dissolved so that it could be granted a charter as the newest chapter of Delta Sigma Theta.

LaWanna McKinley, our chapter's first president once said, 'If given a chance, we will show our worth, and ultimately we will succeed.' Members of this chapter have succeeded in showing our worth by providing such service projects as the Annual Trick or Treat for Sickle Cell fundraising drive. This past fall quarter Epsilon Iota Chapter takes credit for registering to vote a majority of the Black Students on campus. We have also volunteered our services at the Athens Mental Health Center

Phi Kappa Tau

The 1986-87 school year was an incredible year for the brothers of Phi Kappa Tau. In Spring 86, the Phi Taus celebrated several achievements. During Greek Week, the brothers took third place overall - the first time in over a decade. At the second annual Greek Awards Banquet, the Phi Taus took home 10 of 16 prestigious awards presented by Ohio University. Spring quarter concluded with the 75th anniversary celebration of Phi Kappa Tau at OU. Over 100 alumni brothers returned for the memorable event.

Fall quarter the Phi Taus and Alpha Gams teamed-up to dominate the Homecoming festivities. The brothers of Phi Kappa Tau and sisters of Alpha Gamma Delta won second prize in both the float and banner competitions.

Planning for the "Twist and Shout" Dance Marathon was the main focus of winter quarter. During the 11th annual marathon, Phi Taus and Chi Omegas danced twelve straight hours to raise nearly $10,000 to benefit children stricken with neuromuscular diseases in Southeastern Ohio. After coordinating this tremendous fundraiser, the brothers headed for the snow-covered mountains of West Virginia for a weekend of skiing and relaxation.

Spring quarter activities included the traditional Dream Girl Formal in Cincinnati and the annual Phi Kappa Tau Warrior Weekend. Other social functions held throughout the year included the second annual Phi Bash, a 1950s tea, a pajama party, a Christmas tea, Homecoming, and the popular toga parties.

ness, and marked the 33rd Annual Commencement Exercises. The exercises were again split into two days, Friday, June 12th for Graduate students and Saturday, June 13th for Undergraduates.

Professor S. J. DeWine was the keynote speaker for both days of exercises. Professor DeWine is the Director of the Department of Communication. He has been selected by the Graduate Student Senate as the 1984 Outstanding Faculty Member. He is a member of the U. S. House of Representatives and has been a graduate of training in the field of public relations and speech making. He has a Ph.D. in Public Administration, a Ph.D. in Law, and a Ph.D. in Communication. He received two degrees, in 1953, a bachelor of journalism, and in 1955, a masters in government.

The ceremony honored outstanding students and faculty.

The seniors have enjoyed a lot at OU: many Halloween costumes, group projects, classes, clubs, groups, and a lot of classes. Although, these activities may have been the hardest part of the year, they were also the best. That's why saying 'GOOD-BYE!!!!'

The 1986 Athena, volume 82 is a 9 1/2 in. x 12 in. hard cover book of 180 pages.

The 180 pages are of 80lb loe dull paper. The end sheets are 65lbs cover weight in skyblue. The book was printed with offset lithography. Page planner was also used.

The cover base materials are Palladium Grey Lexatone and the applied cover is Pantone 425.

There were 600 press-run copies. The book was printed by Hunter Publishing Company of Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Four-hundred copies were pre-purchased by the end of spring quarter, a major of which were mailed when the book was delivered in the fall.

The senior photos were taken by Varden Studios of New York. The studio also developed all of our photographs.
